United Nations Development Assistance Framework

2008-2012

Executive Summary

1. Background:

The United Nations Development Assistance Framework(UNDAF) summarizes the joint programming of the System's agencies / funds / programs for the 2008-2012 period. This programming exercise is used to define the main areas on which the United Nations will focus its assistance to the country, selected by applying the two-fold criteria of national priorities and the comparative advantages of the System with its mandates and technical resources. The definition of the priority areas and of the expected outcomes is the result of a fruitful coordination process with the national authorities and the other national and international partners of the United Nations in Colombia.

2. Intervention Criteria:

The Millennium Declaration and the Goals defined by the 2000 Summit accurately summarize the priorities and the results expected from the cooperation of the United Nations in Colombia: overcoming poverty in its various manifestations, the conservation and sustainable use of natural resources and the consolidation of democracy are the three main axis of the cooperation program. But it is also a very high priority for the United Nations in Colombia to support the country's efforts to strengthen its democratic institutions, the establishment of conditions for peace, to promote peaceful coexistence and to guarantee the victims of the internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups, the restitution of their rights within the principles of truth, justice and reparation. In Colombia, a country with significant challenges concerning equity, the marginal and excluded groups become the privileged beneficiaries of cooperation: indigenous groups, African-Colombian communities, the people affected by forced displacement, women and in particular female household heads, children and adolescents. Due to the same equity issues and to the regional diversity that characterizes the country, each one of the various goals and outcomes are presented taking into account the regional and local specificities.

3. Priority Areas:

Four expected outcomes summarize the core objectives of this Assistance Framework:

- 1) "The national capacities to improve the access, use and quality of social and productive services will be strengthened, especially in the less-developed territories and for vulnerable groups". The idea is to assist the country in these fields: education, nutrition, health, sexual and reproductive health, HIV/AIDS, habitat and income generation.
- 2) "Strengthened national, regional and local capacities for the integrated regional development management of the territory in order to guarantee sustainable development". The conservation and use of biodiversity and the ecosystems, sustainable production and risk management are specific topics of this item.
- 3) "State institutions at the national and territorial levels denote an improvement in their effective and democratic functioning, in accordance with human rights norms and principles with a vulnerable group and gender focus". Four topics are addressed for the achievement of this expected outcome: the upholding of human rights, the strengthening of citizens' participation, the culture of rule of law and the strengthening of public management.
- 4) Regarding peace, security and reconciliation, it is expected that by the end of the UNDAF term: “The national capacities will have been strengthened in order to consolidate the democratic institutions, the construction of peace, the promotion of peaceful coexistence, human development and the re-establishment of victims’ rights, with a reconciliation and group-based approach”.

4. Allocation of Resources:

For the execution of this cooperation program, the United Nations System expects to mobilize, from its own and from donors' resources, contributions amounting to US$255.321.563, distributed as follows:

|--|-----------------|
| 1) For the poverty, equality and social development areas: | US$ 87.322.000 |
| 2) For sustainable development:                            | US$ 15.302.500 |
| 3) For the strengthening of rule of law and governance:    | US$ 28.730.000 |
| 4) For peace, security and reconciliation:                 | US$123,967,063 |

The above estimates are subject to the future availability of the various agencies' own resources, as well as the specific results of their current and future resource mobilization management. Included are the System's investments made with its own resources and donors mobilization resources. The United Nations Volunteers Programme will participate in several cooperation areas although its specific mission is not the mobilization of financial resources but rather the mobilization of human and technical resources.

5. UNDAF Implementation Plan:

The execution of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework will be under the direction of the Country Team, made up by the Representatives or Directors of the various agencies, funds and programmes with representation in the country. A mechanism to follow up and assess the cooperation program will also be established in conjunction with Acción Social and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs while simultaneously maintaining through the G 24 the coordination with the other international cooperation agencies and the civil society organizations, within the objectives and the mechanisms foreseen in the International Cooperation Strategy of the Colombian Government. A technical inter-agency team will also be created, with working sub-groups for each sector, to maintain permanent follow-up and technical assessment mechanisms and to contribute to the effective and efficient implementation of the cooperation program. The own programs of cooperation of each one of the agencies, funds and programs of the United Nations System in Colombia are derived from this inter-agency Cooperation Framework.

6. Monitoring and Assessment

In order to adequately follow up and assess the implementation and the impact of the inter-agency technical cooperation programme, use will be made of the surveys and studies about the behaviour of the main variables of national life conducted by the National Administrative Department of Statistics [DANE, for its acronym in Spanish] and other entities, particularly those entities with which the United Nations System has partnered; they will be complemented with ad hoc surveys and studies to identify the progress made in the achievement of results and the outcomes and outputs expected in the UNDAF. Periodic progress reports regarding the Millennium Objectives and Goals will be made available and they will be complemented with the Government's reports about the progress of the Development Plan. Within the United Nations, the technical team in charge of the execution and follow up of the UNDAF will present six monthly progress reports for each one of the cooperation areas that will be complemented and enriched with the annual reports prepared by the agencies, funds and programs of their respective Country Programmes.

Each one of these six monthly and annual reports will bolster the process of impact assessment and will offer information for the timely review and adjustment of the expected outcomes, the products and the agreed actions.

PRESENTATION

The United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) reflects the joint vision of the Agencies, Funds and Programs of the United Nations in Colombia with respect to the main challenges faced by the country. It expresses its commitment to support the national efforts for the period 2008-2012 and towards the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals.

Based on an analysis of the situation in the country, the United Nations System in Colombia, together with the Direction of International Cooperation for Social Action, identified four main areas of focus for the country's priorities, in which the added value that the United Nations can provide in assistance and technical cooperation is recognized.

The UNDAF is the result of a highly participatory process in which actively intervened the Agencies, Funds and Programs of the United Nations working in Colombia, the government, territorial institutions, the civil society and the international community, whose contributions were analyzed and incorporated to this document.

In line with the reform process of the United Nations and the Paris Declaration, the UNDAF aims to combine the strengths and efforts of the UN Agencies, Funds and Programs to jointly offer a more coherent, effective and efficient support to the national development efforts.

I would like to thank the representatives of the Government of Colombia, territorial institutions, the civil society and the international community, as well as the representatives of agencies and officials of the United Nations System in Colombia who allowed the preparation of this document.

Bruno Moro
Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator of the United Nations System in Colombia

SECTION 1. Introduction:

The UNDAF has been the most important participative exercise of the UNS in Colombia in several years and it has been an opportunity to work jointly with the National Government and some local governments.

During 2006, 20 agencies with presence in Colombia worked very intensely to jointly define their vision of the priorities, requirements and potentialities of the country. Under the guidance of the Country Team and of the Resident Coordinator, a CCA technical group was formed that worked intensely from February (date of the initial workshop) through November of that same year. After reviewing the most representative documents (of the United Nations, as well as of other governmental and private entities) it was agreed to focus the assessment elements on three main areas: the rule of law, poverty and equality, peace and security. Throughout the process, the progress made was presented to the Country Team and, under their guidance, the technical group advanced until it presented a final version on October 18. The Country Team assigned the Resident Coordinator the task of reviewing the overall wording of the document and of submitting a shorter version of the same, paying particular attention to its political dimensions. In a meeting on November 14, this new version was approved by the Country Team and it was sent to the Regional Team for its review. The Regional Team sent a message approving the document and requesting that the chapter on cooperation priorities be presented in a shorter text. This final version was delivered to the Government in November.

In coordination with the International Cooperation Office of Acción Social (operational counterpart of the UNS in Colombia), the first UNDAF workshop was scheduled for November 29. 20 government agencies were invited by suggestion of Acción Social. 50 UNS officials attended the workshop (including almost all heads of agency), as well as 52 government officials from 18 entities. Support was provided by DGO and the Torino Staff College.

The workshop started with a presentation of the Government's Development Plan (by the National Planning Department), the International Cooperation Strategy of the Colombian Government (by the Direction of International Cooperation of Acción Social) and the CCA document (by the Resident Coordinator).

In a note received from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 27th March, some precisions were recommended, which were analyzed with the responsible entities suggested. These comments were the beginning of an active process of high-level exchange with the Government institutions, which allowed the construction of this definitive proposal.

In accordance with the priorities of the Government and considering the comparative advantages of the UNS in Colombia, four cooperation areas were selected: a) Poverty, equity and social development, b) Sustainable development and alternative development, c) the rule of law and governance and d) Peace, security and reconciliation. Concerning the CCA, a chapter on sustainable development and alternative development was also added due to the importance of the environmental aspect in Colombia as well as to be better aligned with the categories used by the Government in its Cooperation Strategy. Four areas were selected in which, due to its mandate, its experience, its condition of neutrality or its capacity to promote the exchange of international experiences, the United Nations System can become a relevant partner in the national development endeavour.

- a) Colombia is a middle-income country, but due to a complex set of causes (the situation of internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups, the 1999 recession, distribution issues) it has a poverty level covering nearly half its total population. Together with Brazil and Haiti, Colombia completes the trio of Latin American countries with greater inequality in the distribution of wealth. This is in contrast to the most recent indicators that show a very high economic development (6.7% GNP growth for 2006), but with social indicators that are relatively troubling in areas such as maternal mortality, early childhood and higher education, housing and public utilities in certain sectors of the country and in general in the rural areas. It is for these reasons that poverty, equality and social development were selected as the first priority area for cooperation.

- b) An assessment was also made of the fact that the country has an enormous heritage of environmental assets (it is one of the four mega diverse countries of the planet and it is the fourth water-producing country) but it also shows a weak management of the territory and an enormous vulnerability vis-á-vis the natural and man-made risks, all of this due to poverty, the situation of internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups, the topography, the illicit crops, etc. For these main reasons, a second priority area for cooperation was selected: sustainable development. Considering the country's challenge to mitigate the impact of illicit crops on the environment and to offer the small farmers involved in these activities dignified and sustainable alternatives to make a living, the entire cooperation process of the UNS regarding the substitution of illicit crops evolved around the topic of "alternative development".

- c) This complex set of problems occurs in a country with a long democratic tradition (only two years of de facto Government in over 100 years of recent history) and with very solid and legitimate institutions. However, factors such as social exclusion, the situation of internal violence generated by the illegal armed groups and drug trafficking are all permanent challenges to the consolidation of the rule of law, an independent and effective justice system, as well as the strengthening of governance and the general respect of human rights. It is for these reasons that rule of law and governance were chosen as the third area of cooperation.
- d) A prolonged situation of violence (almost 50 years of continuous armed confrontations), and the presence in the country of the powerful drug trafficking business are factors that have a dramatic impact on the security of the people and generate a serious humanitarian situation, evidenced by nearly two million Colombians who have been the victims of forced displacement over the last ten years, according to official sources. For several years the System has backed the significant efforts made by the country and the international community to generate local and regional conditions for the promotion of development, peace, peaceful coexistence and reconciliation throughout the national territory. The humanitarian assistance and its progressive evolution towards sustainable forms of support to the victims of violence has also been –and, in our view, should continue being– an important and very fruitful challenge for the activities of the United Nations in Colombia. Thus, supporting the conditions to strengthen the democratic institutions, the construction of peace, peaceful coexistence and reconciliation, as well as the mitigation of the impact of violence on the population, are the objectives of the fourth and last priority area: peace, security and reconciliation.

The United Nations System consider that its commitment with all the social sectors and the implementation of a respectful cooperation have vested it with a significant convoking capacity around human rights, the values of human development and the Millennium Development Goals. Gender equity is also a cross-cutting element in all the activities of the United Nations and it will continue being so within this joint cooperation framework.

The United Nations System is aware of the fact that its cooperation capacity is subsidiary to the current and significant efforts of the Colombian State to overcome the aforementioned challenges. Through accompaniment and technical cooperation in the formulation and execution of public policies, as well as through its monitoring and assessment, the UNS hopes to contribute to the strengthening of national capacities. The UNS is also aware of the importance to act jointly with the various citizens' organizations, as well as with the other international cooperation entities that are present in Colombia. The acknowledgment of the Government's leadership in the coordination of the different international cooperation efforts, as well as the sustained effort to improve the coordination of its own activities and the relationship with the other cooperation agencies is the best way to express the United Nations' commitment with the principles of the Paris Declaration.

A multi-sector cooperation, resulting from the work of 20 agencies/funds/programs of the UNS in Colombia, with a unified delivery of results, represents our commitment with the country.

SECTION 2: Results

The UNDAF aims to address four main blocks of challenges faced by the country:

A. Concerning poverty, inequality and social development, we expect to achieve as a result of the UNDAF contribution, the “strengthening of the national capacities to increase in an equitable manner the access, the use and the quality of social and productive services, with emphasis on less-developed territories and highly vulnerable groups”. Acknowledgment is made of the country’s leadership in such an effort and, with a clear human rights focus, the aim is to support the priority attention to the territories and to the most vulnerable and more discriminated groups of the population: lower income groups, ethnic minorities, women and children, internally displaced people, less-developed regions.

a) The Millennium Goals basically cover all the aspects of cooperation of the UNS in the country, in accordance with Colombia’s Development Plan for the 2006-2010 period that identifies the achievement of the Millennium Goals as the Government’s priority and the Program for the Eradication of Extreme Poverty as the Government’s social flagship program and as its main instrument for social justice. Likewise, through an integrated approach to development and to poverty, the UNS commitments correspond to those issues of direct interest to the country. Due to the close link between the levels of poverty prevalent in the country, as well as the high level of unemployment and the informalization of the economy, the assistance for the generation of sources of income and the creation and strengthening of competitive business initiatives under the terms of the new international insertion of the country will all be aspects that will receive priority attention by the UNS. As well as the above, the existence of an intensive process of forced internal displacement over the past ten years calls for proposals from the Colombian State and from the UNS, starting with the humanitarian attention to the displaced population in order to offer sustainable solutions covering income generation and basic social services. Access of the Colombian population to employment and opportune, high quality social services, particularly for marginal and excluded groups (as are the displaced population, the more vulnerable social groups, ethnic minorities, regions with the lower development rates, impoverished small farmers, and youngsters) shall be the subject of careful attention of our cooperation to the country for each sector.

- b) Nutrition: assign relevance to the right to nourishment and to back the main policies of the country in the field of nutrition are two of the main objectives of the UNS in this area. In addition, support will be provided for two very specific programs: the strategy to reduce the deficiencies in micronutrients and the promotion of breast feeding. The role of women in the nutrition strategies shall receive special attention. The UNS will support specifically the response of the country to situations of food emergencies, in an effort to develop sustainable solutions on matters concerning income generation and food production.
- c) Health: the UNS aims to develop two major lines of support in the health area: to encourage the promotion of healthy behaviours by the population (within a clear prevention approach) and to strengthen the development of the Health sector of the Social Security System, particularly in regards to its response capacity in cases of emergencies derived from conditions such as the internal forced displacement of the population, especially in the regions.

But the United Nations organizations will also provide support to the country’s priorities contained in the policy priorities on sexual and reproductive health. The adolescents and the young will receive special attention on matters as important as the reduction of the pregnancy rate among the adolescent population, and the cooperation will also be a part of the national effort to reduce the level of maternal mortality.

- d) Regarding poverty and work, the MDGs shall be the subject of permanent attention, especially in the rural scope. The access of the more vulnerable population to productive assets (training, land, and loans), the prevention of child labour and the strengthening of labour markets, shall all be aspects where the UNS will try to complement the country's efforts and capacities. Considering the fact that the country is currently immersed in a significant process of adjustment to new conditions of international economic insertion, the UNS will strive to support regional identification of opportunities, productivity of the business sector (granting priority to the small and medium enterprises) and international competitiveness.
- e) Housing and territorial development: the country has undertaken an ambitious land use planning/zoning program that will continue receiving the support of the United Nations. Support will also be provided for the design of innovative formulas and instruments for programs to finance housing solutions for marginal and excluded groups, and for the creation of healthy, dignified and safe urban and rural environments.
- f) Although Colombia still presents moderate indicators on the prevalence of HIV/AIDS, the national government requests the cooperation of the UNS for the promotion of the new multi-sector plan to fight HIV/AIDS. Support will continue for the efforts to promote the rights of persons living with HIV/AIDS, as well as for the country's efforts to achieve universal access and integral assistance to the persons affected by the epidemic.

The natural partners in this task are governmental entities (various ministries such as the Social Protection Ministry, the Ministry of Education, The Ministry of Culture, the Ministry of Communications, the Vice-presidency of the Republic, the ICBF, the Presidential Advisory Office for the Equity of Women, the SENA, DANE, the Departmental Governments, the local Mayors' offices and other agencies); Public Ministry entities (The General Comptroller's Office of the Republic, The Attorney General's Office, the Ombudsman's Office, the Office of the Prosecutor General of the Republic); and civil society organizations (parents, NGOs, the private sector, media, universities and academic centres, unions and small farmer organizations, churches, etc.).

- B. Colombia is the third mega-diverse country of the planet and its water reserves are extraordinarily abundant. However, an inadequately planned economic development process, the effects of the internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups and drug trafficking, as well as the situation of poverty of large sectors of the population have become real threats against the sustainability of the country's development. For this reason, through the UNDAF, we expect that by 2012 we will have contributed to the attainment of "national, regional and local capacities to enable the integral management of the territory thus assuring a sustainable development process." The System has defined three priority areas in this regard: i) the strengthening of the national capacity for the conservation and use of biodiversity; ii) the strengthening of the national, regional and local capacities – with emphasis on the population and territorial aspects – for a competitive and sustainable development process, able to identify the regional particularities and their comparative advantages; iii) understanding alternative development as the more complete and sustainable proposal for the communities linked to the illicit crops, the UNS will decisively support governmental programs in this area, such as the Forest Protection Families programme.

Finally, the United Nations System aims to support the management of risks derived from natural events (seismic movements, floods, landslides, volcanic eruptions...) and man-made situations (violence, poverty, marginality, illicit crops, etc). It recognizes the close link between the situations of poverty and marginality and the conditions of risk in human settlements.

For this alliance we have the participation of the Ministry of the Environment, Housing and Territorial Development (with its 20 regional development corporations and its associated agencies), the Acción Social office, the Ministry of Mines and Energy and other national and regional entities, both from the public and private sectors.

C. The consolidation of democracy, the strengthening of citizens' participation and the strengthening of the justice system are tasks that have become priorities where the United Nations has clear comparative advantages and the capacity to gather a wide and varied international experience. For these reasons, we expect the "State institutions at the national and territorial levels to demonstrate a strengthening of their effective and democratic functioning, in line with human rights norms and principles, with a differential and gender focus". There are four areas where the United Nations believes its cooperation can be useful and more efficient: i) the policy of respect for and promotion of human rights and the strengthening of justice, ii) the consolidation of the effective practice of citizenship and its participation mechanisms, iii) the consolidation of the culture of legality and its control bodies, and iv) the strengthening of the public administration in terms of transparency, efficiency and efficacy.

The above tasks imply strong alliances with State institutions and with civil society: the Vice-presidency of the Republic, the Ministry of Agriculture, the Planning Councils, the National Reparation and Reconciliation Commission, the ICBF, the Office of the Prosecutor General of the Republic, the High Council of the Judiciary, The Ombudsman's Office, the General Comptroller Office, the political parties, the Superintendency of Notaries and Registry Offices, The National Civil Registry Office, the INCODER, the Agustín Codazzi Geographic Institute, etc.

D. Nearly half a century of internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups, as well as the generalized presence of drug trafficking, call for a decisive commitment of the UNS in Colombia to generate the social conditions that will promote the consolidation of democratic institutions, the construction of peace, the promotion of peaceful coexistence, the eradication of drug trafficking and the prevention of and attention to the effects of violence on the civilian population. It is expected that by the conclusion of the UNDAF "national and territorial capacities for the consolidation of the democratic institutions, the construction of peace, the promotion of peaceful coexistence, human development and the re-establishment of victims' rights, with a differential and reconciliation approach will get strengthened". For the achievement of this result, we expect to continue working jointly with the national authorities and the other international cooperation agencies in the Development and Peace Programmes, as well as in the Peace Laboratories. The UNS will also continue supporting the country's efforts to generate the conditions for peaceful coexistence and reconciliation, especially at the regional and local levels.

In addition, the United Nations will continue complementing the country's efforts to address the troubling humanitarian situation derived mostly from the conditions of internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups. Consequently, it will support the national and international efforts to improve the coordination of the humanitarian effort, as well as to guarantee the respect of the human rights of individuals and of the communities hardest hit by the internal forced displacement and the confinement of the communities. It is recognized that the sectors of the population most directly affected by the forced displacement situation (indigenous and African-Colombian communities, women who are heads of households, etc.) currently make up groups that are particularly isolated and excluded and are also the beneficiaries of multiple actions by the State and the society. Among the country's efforts to generate the conditions for peaceful coexistence and reconciliation, the UNS will support the advances in the strengthening of the transitional justice, in addition to the peace processes, within the criteria of truth, justice and reparation promoted by the State, and particularly by the National Reparation and Reconciliation Commission. Specific manifestations of this situation of internal violence generated by the conflict with the illegal armed groups, such as the recruitment of children and young persons by these groups, the proliferation of land mines, the generation of new situations of risk involving HIV/AIDS, and varied differential forms of impact on women and children (including multiple forms of sexual violence against women and children) are all areas of work in which the UNS will continue and strengthen its efforts to support the country.

The United Nations System will strive to work jointly with multiple entities committed to the task of peace and reconciliation, as well as with those agencies committed to the purpose of mitigating the impact that the prolonged situation of violence has had on the civilian population: Acción Social, the Ministry of the Interior, the Vice-presidency of the Republic, the G 24, Peace and Development Programmes/ Peace Laboratories, the High Commissioner for Peace, the Reinsertion Advisor, the National Reparation and Reconciliation Commission, the media, the civil society organizations, the displaced population and the ethnic minorities, the Public Ministry, the Constitutional Court, the ICBF, and the regional and local authorities and organizations.

The joint work of the UNS on the Millennium Development Goals at the local level will result in the attainment of integral achievements in all the goals. The focus on rights covers all the areas of intervention of the United Nations, without forgetting that the social, economic and reproductive rights are also an integral part of such an approach.

The above figures are the result of estimates carried out by the agencies and they include their own resources and resources that they expect to mobilize, including bilateral, multilateral and private donors. Not included is the cost of consultants and agency officials whose technical cooperation represents a significant contribution. The United Nations Volunteers Programme, in particular, currently participates –and will continue doing so– in multiple areas of the technical tasks of the United Nations in Colombia, although this cooperation is not quantified in the financial statements.

The recent approval by Congress of new regulations for the use of public resources by the international cooperation sector will most likely require significant adjustments in some of the estimates made by several agencies.

SECTION 4. Implementation of the UNDAF

The United Nations Country Team, made up by the Representatives and Directors of all the Agencies, Funds and Programs officially represented in the country will lead the implementation of the 2008-2012 UNDAF. There will be mechanisms of coordination with the National Government, with special attention to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Acción Social. Support will be given to the maintenance and strengthening of the entities in charge of the coordination of efforts with the other international cooperation agencies and with the civil society organizations, especially the G 24. The Colombian Government's International Cooperation Strategy will serve as the general framework within which the United Nations System will carry out the implementation of this UNDAF.

The technical team of the UNDAF, with the participation of all the agencies present in the country, shall act as the coordination and monitoring organization on behalf of the Country Team.

SECTION 5. Monitoring and Evaluation

In order to follow up on the progress and impact of the UNDAF process, special attention shall be given to the Monitoring and Assessment tasks. For that purpose, a matrix of indicators will be developed for each one of the effects and products established in the UNDAF's matrix, and the following schedule will be applied for the Monitoring and Evaluation Programmatic Cycle Calendar:

The various aspects established in this brief presentation will be permanently subject to adjustments and clarifications, always within the dynamics of adjusting the United Nations cooperation programme in Colombia to the country's priorities and to the new conditions that might arise throughout the term of this Cooperation Framework.
